Bartram's Garden

Plant Nursery Highlights
Early Spring 2022

Shop in person at Bartram’s Garden beginning April 1. Thank you for supporting the Garden!
CONTENTS

The following plant nursery highlights have been selected by the growers at Bartram’s Garden and the Sankofa Community Farm at Bartram’s Garden. The assemblage of highlighted plants is meant to help connect you to the spirit of the past, present, and future of these grounds and beyond. From plants that made these lands their home for centuries to crops that were brought over seas through trade or through the forced or voluntary movement of peoples, plants tell stories about who we have been, who we are, and who we can become. We are a place of many stories and we invite you to grow with us!

してください：あなたの庭が最大限に健康になるように、植物は季節に適応したときにのみ販売されます。シーズンが続いている間、より多くの植物が提供されます。このカタログにあるすべての植物が同じ時間に利用可能になるわけではありません。特定の植物を購入する時期について質問がある場合は、お知らせください。

The Upper Kitchen Garden includes examples of plants a family could have grown to sustain their needs in a Philadelphia garden prior to 1830. We include plants that were new and unusual introductions to this continent, such as tomatoes and peppers. A typical kitchen garden prior to the mid-nineteenth century would have included a variety of what were referred to as “herbs”: vegetables, plants used in dyeing and textiles, medicinal and culinary plants, and plants used for cosmetics and household cleaners. Today, we grow a mix of all these categories, as well as seed crops to help preserve varieties that have survived from this time.

Kitchen Garden Classics

The Common Flower Garden is sited on the Schuylkill-facing side of the Bartrams’ home, directly across from their front porch. It contains both native and newly introduced species of flowering plants. During the 18th and 19th century, plants were shared with the Bartrams from all over the world; this garden is curated to represent their most intriguing specimens.

The Wilderness Garden includes a series of gardens and groves between the more formal Upper Gardens and the riverfront. Though there is limited historical information about how this part of the site looked in the Bartrams’ time, wilderness gardens like this were a popular style in 18th-century European estate gardening. John Bartram’s nursery was one of the earliest commercial enterprises to sell North American plants as individuals or fragments. The family made great efforts to observe and record details of relationships within the plants’ original habitat, sometimes but not always noting ethnobotanical relationships. Today’s designs are based on studying natural ecosystems, the Bartrams’ letters, and nursery catalogs of the time. Books from the Bartrams’ library and knowledge gained from Indigenous First Nations of North America from the territories where these plants were collected also inform the design.

When you step into the Ann Bartram Carr Garden you are entering an interpretation of an early 19th-century public exhibition garden. Named for John Bartram’s granddaughter Ann Bartram Carr, who first established this garden space as a public entrance to Bartram’s Garden, it was designed to feature newly imported plant species from around the globe alongside the most fashionable plants of the time. In this garden, you can find living examples of that moment in plant history as well as observe the wildlife that still depends on many of these plants today.

There were once as many as ten greenhouses around the main house at Bartram’s Garden. Beginning in 1760, the first greenhouse was heated by a Franklin stove; later greenhouses were heated with wood fires or, after 1820, anthracite coal. Today, the working greenhouses are insulated with plastic bubbles and heated with electric overhead heaters, sequestered in the southwest portion of the Garden. Currently, there are two greenhouses for Bartram’s Garden and the Sankofa Community Farm along with floor space to raise nursery crops. The plants grown in the Bartram’s Greenhouse are for either the landscape or for nursery sales to the general public—like you! Learn more on p. 8 about the crops Sankofa grows for the farm and community gardens. Nursery offerings change seasonally as we increase the diversity of what we cultivate. The seed and plant trade lives on!

Many of the plants that are grown at Bartram’s Garden play an integral role in the surrounding environment and our health. Some of these plants, such as pollinator plants, support our food web and nurture the ecosystem. Pollinator plants provide nectar for insects and birds. They provide havens for predator insects that keep other insect populations at bay that may devour our crops. The moon garden at the Eastwick Pavilion is specifically planted for moths and other night-time pollinators attracted to plants that are pale colored and night blooming or night scented.
Sankofa Community Farm at Batram’s Garden is a 3.5-acre production and teaching farm rooted in the experience of the African Diaspora in Southwest Philly. For a decade, Sankofa has worked in a unique partnership with Bartram’s Garden and our community youth and elders to connect around foodways, culture, and healing of body, mind and soul. We are a spiritually-rooted farm, honoring the varied wisdom and spiritual practices of our ancestors.

Sankofa Community Farm prioritizes natural agriculture techniques in our farming and we specialize in the raising of crops of the African and African-American Diaspora. As a practice of community healing we provide and teach about the crops that have identified and sustained our community over centuries.
