O, if thou canst, dear wand'ring youth, adieu,
   I'll write thy image and thy memory here,
And at still evening, while I think of you,
   I'll seek thy safety with a prayerful tear.

Cease now, my harp, fall silence on thy strings,
   Dews of the night descend upon my breast,
Breeze, fan my loose locks with thy unfelt wings,
   And rock me, angels, in the arms of rest.

Azora ceas'd; and on the passing winds,
   The murmur of her music died away;
Wapt in big transports, stood the list'ning youth;
Dreams from elysium for a moment bound
In fetters magical, his limbs and tongue;
At length he broke his joy's enchanting spell,
And with a voice of full and mellow tones,
   Thus answer'd to the night-song of the maid—i. o.

A RURAL WALK.

The scenery drawn from nature.

THE summer sun was riding high,
   The woods in deepest verdure drest,
From care and clouds of dust to fly,
   Across yon bubbling brook I past;
And up the hill, with cedars spread,
   Where vines through spice-wood thickets roam,
I took the woodland path, that led
   To Bartram’s hospitable dome.

Thick tow’ring oaks around me rose,
   Tough hickories tall, and walnuts wide,
Hard dog-wood, chinkopin, and sloes
   Were cluster’d round on every side.

Ten thousand busy hums were heard,
   From leafy bough, and herb, and flower;
   The squirrel chipp’d, the tree-frog whirr’d,
   The dove bemoan’d in shadiest bow’r.

The thrush pour’d out his varying song,
   The robin’s artless notes unite,
And loud o'er all the tuneful throng
   Was heard, in mellow tone, "Bob White."

My swelling heart with joy o'erflow'd,
   To hear those happy millions raise
To Nature's universal God
   Such voluntary songs of praise.

Whate'er mistaken Zeal may teach,
   Or gloomy Melancholy spy,
Or vision-seeing prophets preach,
   Or Superstition's fears supply,

Where'er I view this vast design,
   On earth, air, ocean, field, or flood,
All, all proclaim the truth divine,
   That God is bountiful and good.

Thus mus'ning on, I past the rill,
   That steals down moss-grown rocks so slow,
And wander'd up the woodland hill,
   Thick-spread'ing chesnut boughs below.

In yellow coat of mail encas’d,
   With head erect, and watchful eye,
The tortoise, at his mushroom feast,
   Shrank tim’rous as I loiter’d by.

Along the dark sequester'd path,
   Where cedars form an arching shade,
I mark’d the cat-bird’s squalling wrath,
   The jay in shining blue array’d.

And now, emerging on the day,
   New prospects caught my ravish’d eye,
Below—a thousand colours gay,
   Above—a blue o'er-arching sky.

Rich waving fields of yellow grain,
   Green pastures, shelter’d cots and farms,
Gay, glittering domes bestrew’d the plain,
   A noble group of rural charms.

* The quail, or partridge, of Pennsylva

---
A wide-extended waste of wood
   Beyond in distant prospect lay,
Where Delaware's majestic flood
   Shone like the radiant orb of day.

Down to the left was seen afar
   The whiten'd spire of sacred name*,
And ara'nal, where the god of war
   Has hung his spears of bloody fame.

The city's painted skirts were seen,
   Through clouds of smoke ascending high,
While on the Schuylkill's glassy scene
   Canoes and sloops were heard to ply.

There upward where it gently bends,
   And Say's red fortress † tow'rs in view,
The floating bridge its length extends,
   A living scene for ever new.

There market maids, in lively rows,
   With wallows white were riding high,
And thundering gigs, with powder'd beaux,
   Through Gray's green festive shades to roam.

There Bacchus fills his flowing cup,
   There Venus' lovely train are seen,
There lovers sigh, and gluttons sup,
   By shrubb'ry walk, in arbours green.

But dearer pleasures warm my heart,
   And fairer scenes salute my eye,
As thro' these cherry rows I dart
   Where Bartram's fairy landscaptes lie.

Sweet flows the Schuylkill's winding tide,
   By Bartram's green emblossom'd bow'rs,
Where Nature sports, in all her pride
   Of choicest plants, and fruits, and flow'rs.

These sheltering pines that shade the path,
   That tow'ring cypress moving slow,
Survey a thousand sweets beneath,
   And smile upon the groves below.

O happy he who slowly strays,
   On summer's eve, these shades among,
While Phoebus sheds his yellow rays,
   And thrushes pipe their evening song.

From pathless woods, from Indian plains,
   From shores where exile's Britons rove*,
Arabia's rich luxuriant scene,
   And Oraheite's ambrosial grove,

Unnumber'd plants and shrubb'ry sweet,
   Adorning still the circling year,
Whose names the muse can never repeat,
   Display their mingling blossoms here.

Here broad caralpas rear their head,
   And pour their purple blooms profuse,
Here rich magnolias whitening spread,
   And drop with balm-distilling dew.

The crown imperial here behold,
   Its orange circlet topp'd with green,
Not gain'd by slaughter or by gold,
   Nor drop of blood, nor thorn within.

The downy peach, and clustering vine,
   And yellow pears, a bending load,
In mingling groups around entwine
   And strew with fruit the pebbly road.

Here tulips rose in dazzling glow,
   Whose tints arrest the ravish'd eye,
Here laurels bloom, and roses blow,
   And pinks in rich profusion lie.

The genius of this charming scene,
   From early dawn till close of day,
Still busy here and there is seen,
   To plant, remove, or prune away.

To science, peace, and virtue dear,
   And dear to all their noble friends,
Tho' hid in low retirement here,
   His generous heart for all expands.

No little herb, or bush, or flower,
   That spreads its foliage to the day,
From snow-drops born in wintry hour,
   Through Flora's whole creation gay,

But well to him they all are known,
   Their names, their character, and race,
Their virtues when each bloom is gone,
   Their fav'rite home, their native place.

* New Holland.
For them thro' Georgia's sultry clime,
And Florida's sequester'd shore,
Their streams, dark woods, and cliffs sublime,
His dangerous way he did explore.*

And here their blooming tribes he tends,
And tho' revolving winters reign,
Still spring returns him back his friends,
His shades and blossom'd bowers again.

One flower, one sweet and faithful flower,
Worth all the blossom'd wilds can give,
Forsakes him not tho' seasons sour,
Tho' winter's roaring tempests rage;

But still with gentlest look and air,
Befriends his now declining years,
By every kind officious care,
That virtue's lovely self endears.

When science calls, or books invite,
Her eyes the waste of age supply,
Detail their pages with delight,
Her dearest uncle list'n'ng by.

When sorrows press, for who are free?
Her generous heart the load sustains,
In sickness none so kind as she,
To soothe and to assuage his pains.

Thus twines the honeysuckle sweet,
Around some trunk decay'd and bare,
Thus angels on the pious wait,
To banish each distressing care.

O, happy he who slowly strays,
On summer's eve, these shades among,
While Phoebus sheds his yellow rays,
And thrushes pipe their evening song.

But happier he, supremely blest!
Beyond what proudest peers have known,
Who finds a friend in Anna's breast,
And calls that lovely plant his own.

The angry storms of awful fate
Around my little bark may roar,
May drive me from this dear retreat,
A wanderer on a distant shore;

* See Bartram's Travels, where the imagination is entertained with the most luxuriant description of these scenes, while the heart is charmed with the benevolent sentiments of the writer.

But while remembrance's power remains,
There rosy bowers shall bliss my view,
Sweet shades of peace! on foreign plains,
I'll sigh and shed a tear for you.

MONODY.

NEAR where you streamlet slowly finds
With pebbly noise its silver way,
And where his horn the beetle winds,
To swell the dirge of closing day,

While many a flower of earliest spring,
Round the light greenward bending creeps,
And many an insect's glossy wing
Slow circles o'er the humming steeps:

There rests the hamlet's native pride,
The fairest maid that deck'd its green,
In soul to heaven alone allied,
In form a grace, a love in mein.

Oh! she was gentle as the air,
Which plays on summer's tranquil breast:
A heart, so kind to every care,
Warms but the tender turtle's nest.

Her voice was sweeter than the lyre,
That steals each echo from the breeze,
Her eye the blue with chasten'd fire,
That wins us, ere it seems to please.

Oft, when the wild gust shook the leaf,
Her voice in mellow tones would pour,
So soft, so sad, its touching grief!
So soft, so sad, it swells no more!

Nor more, as wont, at vernal wake
With merry steps they dance the hays,
But sighs from every bosom break
For her, who blest their youthful days.

So, while at eve the hoary swain
Recounts the tale to infant ears,
They seek the grave of lovely Jane,
And turn their ready sports to tears.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

TO our valuable correspondent near Gray's Ferry, our respectful gratitude is due for his favours. The poem handed to us lately, possesses merit superior to those that have preceded it, and shall receive honourable place in our next number.

The author of elegiac verses on Alexander Hamilton, is earnestly exhorted to indulge his poetical vein without reserve. Nothing which his genius can coin can ever be spurious or exploded with men of true poetical taste.

The letter, in answer to some remarks on the first volume of Washington, entitles the writer to our thanks, and shall receive early insertion.

The translator of verses from the French, possesses a happy genius for the gay, sportive, and tender. The editor would deem himself fortunate if he could by any means stimulate this estimable correspondent to the frequent exercise of the pen, both in prose and verse. He will see that, in the present number, a liberty has been taken with him, with which, it is feared, he will be displeased. The editor must arm himself against this displeasure by the approbation of every other reader, who must deem themselves under obligations to one who has thus, though unintentionally, supplied them with the most delightful banquet. His poetry shall appear in our next.
ceased merit. His will appears to have been literally executed at the time he himself prescribed, and by a hand more worthy of his genius than any other which England could at present furnish. The remains of learned men are generally presented to the world either in a different order, or with less completeness, than they themselves had prescribed; and their biographers are men not unfrequently the least qualified for the arduous and delicate employment, among all their survivors. In this instance, the only pen in England which Richardson's sublimed and disembodied intelligence would have selected, is, most probably, that of Letitia Barbauld. This publication is adorned with portraits, likewise by a female artist, and with fac similes of the writing of eminent men, Richardson's friends and correspondents.

Mr. Barrow, who sometime ago produced the best specimen of philosophical travels, in his account of southern Africa, which is extant, has just presented to the world the fruit of his observations, during the embassy of McCartney to China, to which he was attached. The most ardent expectations of entertainment and instruction may reasonably be expected from this work. It will, no doubt, be a most valuable supplement to Sir George Staunton's great work on the same subject.

POETRY....ORIGINAL.

For the Literary Magazine.

THE SOLITARY TUTOR.

WHOE'ER across the Schuylkill's winding tide,
Beyond Gray's Ferry half a mile, has been,
Down in a bridge-built hollow must have spy'd
A neat stone school-house on a sloping green:
There tufted cedars scatter'd round are seen,
And stripling poplars planted in a row;
Some old gray white oaks overhang the scene,
Pleas'd to look down upon the youths below,
Whose noisy noontide sports no care or sorrow know.

On this hand rise the woods in deepening shade,
Resounding with the songs of warblers sweet,
And there a waving sign-board hangs display'd
From mansion fair, the thirsty soul's retreat;
There way-worn pilgrims rest their weary feet,

When noontide heats or evening shades prevail:
The widow's fare, still plentiful and neat,
Can nicest guest deliciously regale,
And make his heart rejoice the sorrel horse to hail.

Adjoining this, old Vulcan's shop is seen,
Where winds, and fires, and thumping hammers roar,
White-wash'd without, but black enough within....
Emblem of modern patriots many a score.
The restive steed impatient at the door,
Starts at this thundering voice and brawny arm,
While yellow Jem with horse-tail fans him o'er,
Driving aloof the ever buzzing swarm,
Whose shrill blood-sucking pipes his restless fears alarm.

An ever varying scene the road displays,
With horsemen, thundering stage, and sately team,
Now burning with the sun's resplendent rays,
Now lost in clouds of dust the travellers seem,
And now a lengthen'd pond or miry stream
Deep sink the wheels, and slow they drag along,
Journeying to town, with butter, apples, cream,
Fowls, eggs, and fruit, in many a motley throng,
Coop'd in their little carts their various truck among.

And yonder, nestled in enclust'ring trees,
Where many a rose-bush round the green yard glows,
Wall'd from the road, with seats for shade and ease,
A yellow-fronted cottage sweetly shows:
The towering poplars rise in spiry rows,
And green catalpas, white with branchy flowers:
Her matron arms a weeping willow throws
Wide o'er the dark green grass, and pensive lours,
Midst plumb-trees, pillar'd hops, and honey-suckle bowers.

Here dwells the guardian of these younglings gay,
A strange recluse and solitary wight,
In Britain's isle, on Scottish mountains gray,
His infant eyes first open'd to the light.
His parents saw with partial fond delight
Unfolding genius crown their fostering care,
And talk'd with tears of that enrapturing sight,
When, clad in sable gown, with solemn air,
The walls of God's own house should echo back his pray'r.

Dear smiling Hope! to thy enchanting hand,
What cheering joys, what extasies we owe!
Touch'd by the magic of thy fairy wand,
Before us spread, what heavenly prospects glow!
Tho' Life's rough thorny wild we lab'ring go,
And tho' a thousand disappointments grieve,
Ev'n from the grave's dark verge we forward throw
Our straining, wishful eyes on those we leave,
And with their future fame our sinking hearts relieve.

But soon, too soon these fond illusions fled!
In vain they pointed out that pious height;
By Nature's strong resistless impulse led,
These dull dry doctrines ever would he slight.
Wild Fancy form'd him for fantastic flight;
He lov'd the steep's high summit to explore,
To watch the splendour of the orient bright,
The dark deep forest, and the sea-beat shore,
Where thro' resounding rocks the liquid mountains roar.

When gath'ring clouds the vaults of Heav'n o'erspread,
And op'ning streams of livid light'ning flew,
From some o'ershooting cliff the uproar dread,
Transfix'd in rapt'rous wonder, he would view.
When the red torrent big and bigger grew,
Or deep'ning snows for days obscur'd the air,
Still with the storm his transports would renew,
Roar, pour away! was still his eager pray'r,
While shiv'ring swains around were sinking in despair.

That worldly gift which misers merit call,
But wise men cunning and the art of trade,
That scheming foresight how to scrape up all,
How pence may groats, and shillings pounds be made,
As little knew he as the moorland maid
Who ne'er beheld a cottage but her own:
Sour Parsimony's words he seldom weigh'd,
His heart's warm impulse was the guide alone,
When suffering friendship sigh'd, or weeping wretch did moan.

Dear, dear to him Affection's ardent glow,
Alas! from all he lov'd for ever torn,
E'en now, as Memory's sad reflections flow,
Deep grief o'erwhelms him, and he weeps forlorn;
By hopeless thought, by wasting sorrow worn.
Around on Nature's scenes he turns his eye,
Charm'd with her peaceful eve, her fragrant morn,
Her green magnificence, her gloomiest sky,
That fill th' exulting soul with admiration high.

One charming nymph with transport he adores,
Fair Science, crown'd with many a figure'd sign;
Her smiles, her sweet society implores,
And mixes jocund with th' encircling nine;
While mathematics solves his dark design,
Sweet Music soothes him with her syren strains,
Seraphic Poetry with warmth divine,
Exalts him far above celestial plains,
And Painting's fairy hand his mimic pencil trains.

Adown each side of his sequester'd cot,
Two bubbling streamlets wind their rocky way,
And mingling as they leave this rural spot,
Down thro' a woody vale meandering stray,
Round many a moss-grown rock they dimpling play,
Where laurel thickets clothe the steeps around,
And oaks thick towering quite shut out the day,
And spread a venerable gloom profound,
Made still more sweetly solemn by the riv'let's sound,

Where down smooth glistening rocks it rambling pours,
Till in a pool its silent waters sleep.
A dark brown cliff o'ertopp'd with fern and flowers,
Hangs grimly frowning o'er the glassy deep;
Above thro' cv'ry chink the woodbines creep,
And smooth dark beeches spread their arms around,
Whose roots cling twisted round the rocky steep;

A more sequester'd scene is no where found,
For contemplation deep and silent thought profound.
Here many a tour the lonely tutor takes,
Long known to Solitude, his partner dear,
For rustling woods his empty school forsakes,
At morn, still noon, and silent evening clear.
Wild Nature's scenes amuse his wandering here;
The old gray rocks that overhang the stream,
The nodding flow'rs that on their peaks appear,
Plants, birds, and insects are a feast to him,
Howe'er obscure, deform'd, minute, or huge they seem.

Sweet rural scenes! unknown to poet's song,
Where Nature's charms in rich profusion lie,
Birds, fruits, and flowers, an ever pleasing throng,
Deny'd the Britain's bleak and northern sky.
Here Freedom smiles serene with dauntless eye,
And leads the exil'd stranger thro' her groves,
Assists to sweep the forest from on high,
And gives to man the fruitful field he loves.
Where proud imperious lord or tyrant never roves.

In these green solitudes one fav'rite spot
Still draws his slow meanderings that way,
A mossy cliff beside a little grot,
Where two clear springs burst out upon the day.
There overhead the beechen branches play,
And from the rock the clustered columbine,
While deep below the brook is seen to stray,
O'erhung with alders, briar, and mantling vine,
While on th' adjacent banks the glossy laurels shine.
Here Milton's heav'nly themes delight his soul,
Or Goldsmith's simple heart-bewitching lays;
Now drives with Cook around the frozen pole,
Or follows Bruce with marvel and a maze:
Perhaps Rome's splendidly sadly he surveys,
Or Britain's scenes of cruelty and kings;
Thro' Georgia's groves with gentle Bartram's strays,
Or mounts with Newton on archangels' wings,
With manly Smollet laughs, with jovial Dibdin sings.

The air serene, and breathing odours sweet,
The sound of falling streams, and humming bees,
Wild choirs of songsters round his rural seat,
To souls like his have ev'ry pow'rt to please.
The shades of night with rising sigh he sees
Obscure the stream and leafy scene around,
And homeward bending thro' the moonlight trees,
The owl salutes him with her tremulous sound,
And many a flutt'ring bat pursues its mazy round.

Thus peaceful pass his lonely hours away;
Thus, in retirement from his school affairs,
He tastes a bliss unknown to worldlings gay,
A soothing antidote for all his cares.
Adoring Nature's God, he joyous shares
With happy millions Freedom's fairest scene,
His ev'ning hymn some plaintive Scotch airs,
Breath'd from the flute or melting violin,
With life inspiring reels and wanton jigs between.

THE ADIEU.

ADIEU to sweet ——— ———, adieu!
The village is look'd for in vain,
The woodland has shut it from view;
Yet shall behold it again.

And Harriot, whose elegant mien
Led captive the eye as she mov'd,
A place in my heart will retain,
She's found out the way to be lov'd.
Ah, when will fate make me amends?
Ah, when for these tortures alone?
I'm smil'd on a moment by friends,
The next, the sweet vision has flown!

Maria, so lately unknown,
Too swells the soft sigh at my heart,
Her mind so resembled my own,
I felt it like sorrow to part;
Her countenance open as day,
Her soft and intelligent eye,
Seem'd sweetly, I fancied, to say,
A spirit congenial am I.

And these are the gambols she plays,
Each day it appears at her will,
A sceptre of iron she sways,
Not a change but what's teeming with ill.
The friends of my youth were convey'd
Far distant, or wrapt in the tomb;
I've wander'd thro' life in the shade,
I'm mantled in Destiny's gloom.

But why those repinings of mind?
A Providence rules over all;
Then give me the portion assign'd,
Or sweetness, or wormwood and gall,
I'll fancy it all for the beat,
For all it decrees must be right,
Nor murmur at Heaven's behest,
Though ever encircled by night.

And now, courteous ——— ———, adieu;
The claim on politeness is paid,
So leave us our way to pursue,
And return to your favourite maid.
Return, see the cloud ascends high,
And threatens a torrent of rain,
Loud thunders roll over the sky,
Sharp lightning glares over the plain:
